We begin the month with a program in which Ken Hood will help us understand the technique that Citizen Action Wisconsin uses to engage citizens in order to foster real dialogue.

Next we kick off our annual fund-raiser for the work of the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee. Our little fellowship has generously supported UUSC's work for social and environmental justice for many, many years, an accomplishment of which we should be justifiably proud. The theme for this year's project is: The Meaning of Home. For many of us, our relationship with home has intensified this year and the pandemic has given many of us new appreciation for, and concerns about, the places we call home and the centrality of these places in our lives. April will explain how UUSC's partners around the world are helping make homes for others.

Arthur Thexton returns to join us from Milwaukee to explore the question of what it means to be spiritual for a Unitarian Universalist, why it's a good thing, and how we do it.

Finally, Kent and Jim wish to engage us in a consideration of how the processes of science intersect with our views of what is right, especially in the context of the world of nature around us.
